If the enzyme is secreted efficiently into the GI tract and is absorbed effectively, then the protein is detected. A recent report from our laboratory on the outcome of feeding an experimental diet containing heat-denatured milk whey protein to non-lactating cows supports this argument \[@B37\]. However, since a limited amount of the enzyme is absorbed and utilized in the animal, the amount of enzyme consumed will also be reflected in the amount of protein in the diet. 4.
